

Blocks

I'm learning as I move my fine- and gross-motor muscles, and I'm learning about spatial relationships, balance, stability, gravity, and geometry. I'm figuring out how to fit blocks together and learning about multiple dimensions and perspectives. Because of these fun activities in the block center, it'll be easier for me to read a map when I get older. I'm testing my ideas and using my imagination. I'm classifying the blocks by shape, size, and color.

He is like a man building a house, who dug down deep and laid the foundation on rock. When a flood came, the torrent struck that house but could not shake it, because it was well built.

—Luke 6:48, NIV